Certain watches are designed to be loyal travelling companions, for sharing precious experiences. One example is the Bay Ho collection. The five models see five different variations, all designed for those who cannot do without unique style and elegance. One thing hasn't changed, though: Nautica's ingrained quality standards. Starting from the 46-millimetre case, a body which can withstand depths of up to 100 metres, with a multifunction dial indicating the day and date, and a crown protector in red anodised steel. It is a timekeeper with a sophisticated look, right down to the details that render it unique. The boating lifestyle spirit is engraved on the fixed upper bezel upon which the flags, the cornerstone of the nautical world, transform Bay Ho into a truly unmistakable collection. The brand's hallmark elements include the navy colours with pops of accents such as red and white. Each model has its own style, and each is played out in the combinations of materials used, such as the strap in silicone or stainless steel, and colours which are used in a way that ensures they leave their mark.
