The keyword of Soledad South is adventure. A style code which is an integral part of a model designed to give its very best under every circumstance. A strong, determined spirit, thanks to its 46-millimetre steel case which can withstand depths of up to 100 metres. With its instrumental dial, Soledad South lavishes the utmost attention on detailing. It allows tides and temperature to be read off precisely, whilst the compass provides orientation in any condition, including moonlit adventures. The details upon which Nautica has built its reputation are as present as ever. The nautical flags all see a return appearance, as do the red, white and blue used for the skeleton-cut hands. For those that sail the seas, the hands are vital for marking time even in the dark, thanks to the Indiglo technology used. This technology lights up the whole watch face, making it impossible to miss a single second. Soledad South is also about comfort, with its woven blue silicone strap which is the perfect companion for any crossing, a cruise on a sailing boat, an afternoon out at the seaside or a dinner, perhaps in the company of friends in search of adventure
